When designing the site flow of the final project I thought of the possible flow of the site through the different navigation tabs of the site. I started the map through the home page and how open it was to take the user through many of the possible choices. When clicking on the navigation the user will be taken to different pages in relation to what they clicked to further get them to the goal of either reading a story or reaching the author of the story depending on what the user wants from there.